BREAKING:

NC Governor delays Atlantic Coast Pipeline approval!

North Carolina Governor Roy Cooper today announced that he would delay until mid-December his decision whether to permit the construction of the controversial 600-mile natural gas pipeline that would end in eastern North Carolina.

The Rachel Carson Council has been organizing to stop the ACP, including a march along the proposed pipeline route that would displace homeowners as well as blast and destroy the landscape. Many of those living along the proposed pipeline path, especially in North Carolina, are disproportionately disadvantaged, including African Americans, Latinos, and indigenous members of the Lumbee nation.

This victory for the RCC and other environmental and justice groups means we can build even more momentum against the ACP! We will be doubling our efforts in the next three months including intense organizing at Duke, UNC-Chapel Hill and seven other campuses in North Carolina to engage students and faculty.

We need your engagement and support to stop the ACP once and for all! Please chip in $10, $50, $100, or whatever you can afford today! We only have 90 days to make our voices heard!

Governor Cooper's office has already thanked the RCC for its recent, powerful report against the ACP, Blast Zone: Natural Gas and the Atlantic Coast

Pipeline: Causes, Consequences and Civic Action. It concluded that the ACP was “unnecessary, unsafe, and unjust.”

The RCC and its work have been part of a growing grassroots opposition to the ACP involving environmental justice groups, campuses, homeowners, and more. Help us keep the momentum going and secure a full victory in December!

Please chip in with a tax-deductible contribution now of $10, 50, 100 or more!

Thank you for your support and your action!
